Think back to an instance in which you were tempted to “bend the rules”. Even though we all know that “cheaters never prosper”, at some time each of us has found ourselves “pulled” in two different directions at once, with good reasons justifying each direction.

Write a couple of lines below describing the situation in which you were pulled in two different directions. Then add a couple of more lines describing how you felt as you were trying to decide what to do. What were your thoughts. Do not write down your eventual decision.
